

ABSTRACT

A unit has an array of lasers having an emission surface through which beams can be emitted in a substantially vertical direction so as to define an emission side, drive electronics connected to a side opposite to the emission side of the array of lasers, and an array of modulators, located on the emission side of the array of lasers and connected to the drive electronics.